Thank you for making your Race Online 2012 Promise.

We're all better off when everyone's online.

Heather took custody of her 13 year old sister when she was herself just 19. The computer let her reconnect with friends and family via social networking sites, get vital advice on how to act as a parent to her teenage sister, draw up a CV and find a job in retail. Heather is now zealously passing her computer skills on to people in neighbouring flats and tower blocks. This, she says quite simply, "turned my life around".

I started this work because I thought I was interested in the combination of technology and social justice but it has now turned into a mission – lets create a 100% connected, inspired and truly remarkable UK!

Thank you for making your Race Online 2012 promise.

Together we can build a creative, connected, inspired and truly remarkable UK, where everyone can enjoy the life-changing opportunities that the internet offers.
